Putting Our Hands to the Plow:
Lay People, the Church, and the Reign of God

How might we discern together the place of lay people in our common call to discipleship during this time of being church in the United States? The recent report on church sex abuse has opened up this question anew. Reflecting on the role and participation of the laity can lead us to imagine possiblities of leadership renewal and commitment to the Reign of God.

At this conversation, Dr. Francesco Cesareo will reflect with us on what he sees to be current opportunities and challenges to lay participation in the church. Come join us for this important conversation.

Dr. Francesco Cesareo is the President of Assumption College, as well as the Chairperson of the National Review Board that advises the United States Bishops' Secretariat for Child and Youth Protection.
