

The pandemic is getting old. Usually, we refer to these days as the “dog days of August,” when the accumulated heat of summer days and the lethargy they induce are to be put up with for a few more weeks. For baseball fans, it normally means the slog through the late summer schedule before the home stretch in September.

Read more...