

Archbishop Mbogha Kambale Charles, A.A. (1942-2005)

The oldest of the Augustinians of the Assumption, Archbishop Mbogha Kambale Charles, A.A., (63 years old) died in Bukavu (eastern Democratic Republic of Congo) on Sunday, October 9, 2005, at 2:37 AM (local time). The illness that led to his death (high blood pressure which resulted in a stroke) came to light during the ceremony on the day he was to become archbishop of Bukavu in June 2001. From that day he had been taking medication and following a regime of rehabilitation exercises, all the while completing his mission as well he could as the pastor and overseer of the Ecclesiastical Province of Kivu. During those four long years, Archbishop Charles proved to be a man of great faith.

In a country where every illness or every ill fate is attributed to bad spirits or bad peoples called sorcerers, Archbishop Charles evangelized the faithful of his Archdiocese by his faith, his hope, and his unfailing love towards all, always asking his hearers not to forget that suffering and sickness are part of our life, and that Jesus, in his death and resurrection, had shown us how to overcome suffering and death in our life. Archbishop Charles was for his priests a real father, a model and a witness of ministry in time of sorrow. For his Assumptionists brothers, he was an educator and a promoter of the inculturation of the Assumptionist religious life into the African culture. For Four Years (1998-2002), the bishops of Congo elected him the President of the Episcopal Committee for Religious Life. As assumptionist, Father Charles occupied all the posts of responsibility, in schools, in houses of formation, and in parishes. With a heart of a father and of an educator, Archbishop Charles was helping many young Congolese men and women to pay their school fees and get a good education because he believed only education in all its forms will transform Congo into a better place to live. The African Province has lost its elder but as the elder precedes us into God’s Kingdom, we know he will continue to play his role of elder among the many and intercede for the Province of Africa, the Assumptionist family, and the many dioceses he served as a bishop. Born at Lubango-Kilubo (Diocese of Butembo-Beni, Nord-Kivu, D.R.Congo) in 1942 and ordained priest in 1969, Charles Mbogha Kambale joined the Augustinians of the Assumption (A.A.) in 1972. Bishop of Wamba (1990-1995) and later of Isiro-Niangara (1996- 2001), he had become Archbishop of Bukavu in June 2001. Archbishop Charles Mbogha Kambale’s funeral will take place on Wednesday, October 12, in the Cathedral of Bukavu (Sud-Kivu, D.R.Congo), local Catholic Church where he was serving as archbishop.
